vention.

The Rural Road Improvement League, which was organized in Rehmond last March, is a State-wide movement for the consolidation of the good road agencies in the various counties. It has primarily for its object the encouragement of individuals to give their personal labor and the services of their teams to the improvement of the roads in the rural sections. Working along this line, the league has had a very successful beginning, and the principle advocated by it has been cordially received by the people of the counties. County units of the league have been well organized in more than forty counties.

ity, say the publishers, the California retail price for the primer is 20 cents.

Again, the committee's table put down
the California price of a first reader at 15 cents and the Virginia price at 32 cents, whereas, say the publishers, 32 cents, whereas, say the publishers, the California retail price is really 20 cents.

In California the books are furnished free by the State to children in the public schools. The only sales by retailers are to pupils of private and parochial schools. Sales are required by law to be strictly cash, with no re-turn of old books, and no danger of bad credits as in Virginia. In view bad credits as in Virginia. In View of the different circumstances governing the textbook business in California and Virginia, the publishers maintain, the prices quoted in Virginia are reasonable.

It is doubtful whether this opinion will be shared by the State Board of Education, but the publishers' brief certain to inject a new element into the book controversy.
